The study questions (pages 2 to 6) are designed to help students develop critical thinking skills. Students should be encouraged to go beyond just “finding” exact answers within the information presented. They should be able to integrate and synthesize information and use the process to recognize similar scenarios in other settings. The majority of the study questions has no precise “right” answer (pages 7 and 8), but rather should include a range of ideas and concepts that will vary with individual student backgrounds. Required reading, basic solutions and approaches to the questions are provided with each topic.
